17th Symposium on Application of Plasma Processes (SAPP XVII)

January 17-22, 2009

Hotel Máj, Liptovský Ján, Low Tatras, Slovakia

Invitation

You are cordially invited to attend the 17th Symposium of Application of Plasma Processes (SAPP XVII), which will be held in Hotel Máj, Liptovský Ján, Low Tatras, Slovakia.

General Information

The SAPP is a biennial international conference, the last having been held in Podbanské in 2007. Topics range from the basic physics and chemistry of thermal and low pressure plasmas to industrial processes and processing techniques. The symposium creates forums to discuss recent developments and exchange the information and ideas between researches and industrial practitioners.

Topics

1. Electrical discharges and other plasma sources
2. Elementary processes and plasma chemical reactions
3. Plasma-surface interactions
4. Plasma treatment of polymer and biological material
5. Nanometer-scaled plasma technology

Symposium Program

The Conference program will include 12 invited lectures, 24 short lectures and poster presentations.

Social Program

A number of social events will be organized for conference participants and their guests. The program will include every day skiing. There will be a variety of other possibilities such as excursions and sightseeing tours.

Language

The Symposium language will be English.

Location

Hotel Máj in Liptovský Ján is located in northern part of Low Tatras mountains. Distant 300 km from the Slovak capital, Bratislava (350 km from Vienna airport in Schwechat). The closest town with international bus and train connections is Liptovský Mikuláš, approximately 7 km from Liptovský Ján.

Deadlines

1st Announcement: February 29th, 2008
